

0 The Fool

new beginnings · trust · adventure · leap of faith

The Fool is the breath before the first step. It speaks to openness, curiosity, and the courage to begin before every answer is clear.

Upright

Upright, The Fool invites you to meet life with fresh eyes. This card can appear when a new path is opening and you are being asked to move with trust rather than over-control.

Reversed

Reversed, The Fool may point to hesitation, scattered energy, or a choice that needs more grounding. It does not cancel the beginning, but it asks for a wise first step.

Major Arcana

22 Cards of the Fool's Journey

In Love

In love, The Fool can suggest a new connection, playful honesty, or a relationship phase that benefits from less fear and more presence.

In Career

For career, The Fool often appears around a new role, creative risk, freelance path, or learning curve that requires courage and flexibility.

"What would I try if I did not need the world to approve?"

Journal Prompts

- Where am I being invited to begin again?
- What fear is making a new step feel larger than I am?
- What support would make this leap feel grounded?

I The Magician

willpower · skill · manifestation · focus

The Magician is the card of applied intention. It reminds you that talent becomes real when attention, tools, and action align.

Upright

Upright, The Magician says you already have more resources than you realize. Choose one clear aim and let your words, time, and energy point in the same direction.

Reversed

Reversed, this card can indicate unused potential, distraction, or a mismatch between what is promised and what is practiced.

In Love

In love, The Magician asks for direct communication. Charm is welcome, but integrity matters more than performance.

In Career

For career, The Magician is excellent for launches, pitches, skill-building, and moments when you need to turn ideas into visible work.

"What tool, skill, or choice is already in my hands?"

Journal Prompts

- Where is my energy currently scattered?
 - What one outcome deserves my focused attention?
 - How can I make my intention visible this week?

II The High Priestess

intuition · mystery · inner knowing · stillness

The High Priestess points inward. She represents quiet knowing, subtle perception, and the wisdom that appears when you stop forcing an answer.

Upright

Upright, this card asks you to listen beneath the obvious story. Pay attention to dreams, patterns, body signals, and what remains true in silence.

Reversed

Reversed, The High Priestess can suggest ignoring intuition, over-sharing too soon, or mistaking anxiety for inner guidance.

In Love

In love, she may indicate unspoken feelings, emotional privacy, or the need to observe a dynamic before naming it too quickly.

In Career

For career, this card supports research, strategy, confidential work, and waiting until the right information has surfaced.

"What do I know quietly, before I explain it?"

Journal Prompts

- What signal have I been dismissing?
 - Where would silence give me better information than reaction?
 - What boundary protects my inner clarity?

III The Empress

nurturing · creativity · abundance · embodiment

The Empress is growth you can feel. She speaks to care, creativity, sensuality, and the kind of abundance that is cultivated over time.

Upright

Upright, The Empress encourages nourishment, creative expression, and a softer relationship with productivity. What you tend with patience can flourish.

Reversed

Reversed, she can point to depletion, over-giving, creative blockage, or difficulty receiving care.

In Love

In love, The Empress suggests warmth, affection, attraction, and a relationship that grows through care rather than pressure.

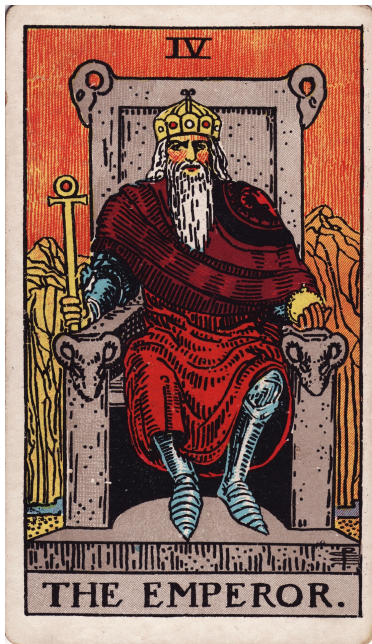

In Career

For career, she supports creative projects, brand building, hospitality, design, and work that benefits from beauty and consistency.

"What needs care before it can grow?"

Journal Prompts

- Where am I giving without receiving?
 - What creative impulse wants more room?
 - How can I make my daily environment more nourishing?

IV The Emperor

structure · authority · boundaries · stability

The Emperor brings form to intention. He represents structure, responsibility, leadership, and the calm strength of clear boundaries.

Upright

Upright, The Emperor asks you to define the container. Plans, rules, schedules, and standards can protect what matters instead of limiting it.

Reversed

Reversed, this card can show rigidity, control struggles, avoidance of responsibility, or a system that needs to be rebuilt.

In Love

In love, The Emperor may highlight commitment, reliability, boundaries, or the need to balance protection with emotional availability.

In Career

For career, this is a strong card for management, operations, long-term planning, and stepping into a more visible role.

"What structure would help me feel freer, not smaller?"

Journal Prompts

- Where do I need a clearer boundary?
 - What responsibility am I ready to own?
 - What system would make consistency easier?

V The Hierophant

tradition · teaching · belief · belonging

The Hierophant explores the wisdom and weight of tradition. It asks what you have inherited, what teaches you, and what values you choose to live by.

Upright

Upright, this card can point to study, mentorship, shared values, spiritual practice, or learning through an established path.

Reversed

Reversed, The Hierophant may suggest questioning old rules, outgrowing a group, or finding a more personal relationship with belief.

In Love

In love, it can indicate commitment, shared values, family expectations, or a relationship shaped by social or cultural norms.

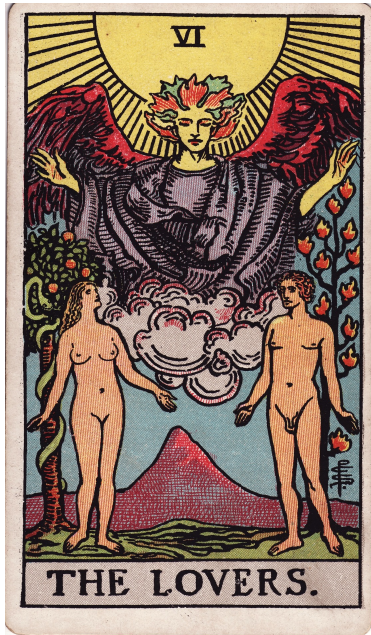

In Career

For career, this card favors education, certification, institutions, mentorship, and learning the rules before changing them.

"Which beliefs still guide me, and which ones simply followed me here?"

Journal Prompts

- What tradition supports my growth?
 - Where am I following a rule I no longer believe in?
 - Who has been a meaningful teacher for me?

VI The Lovers

choice · union · values · alignment

The Lovers is about connection, but also choice. It asks whether your desires, values, and actions are aligned with one another.

Upright

Upright, The Lovers can represent intimacy, mutual attraction, meaningful choice, and the clarity that comes when you choose from your values.

Reversed

Reversed, it may point to mixed signals, misalignment, avoidance of a decision, or a relationship that needs more honest communication.

In Love

In love, this is a powerful card for attraction and partnership, especially when both people are choosing each other consciously.

In Career

For career, The Lovers can appear when a decision must reflect more than money: values, ethics, identity, and long-term fit matter.

"What choice would bring me closer to my values?"

Journal Prompts

- Where do my actions and values disagree?
 - What kind of love requires a clearer choice?
 - What am I choosing by not choosing?

VII The Chariot

direction · discipline · momentum · victory

The Chariot is focused movement. It appears when determination, self-command, and emotional discipline can carry you forward.

Upright

Upright, The Chariot says progress is possible when you choose a direction and hold it. Confidence grows through movement.

Reversed

Reversed, it may signal scattered energy, force without strategy, or a need to pause before pushing harder.

In Love

In love, The Chariot can show a relationship moving forward, or the need for both people to steer in the same direction.

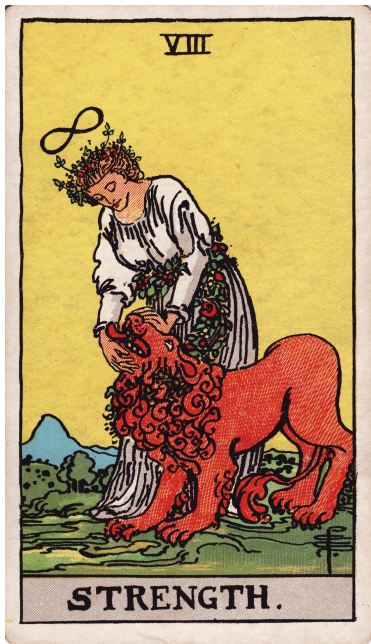

In Career

For career, this card favors launches, deadlines, competitions, travel, and goals that need disciplined execution.

"Where does my energy need a clearer direction?"

Journal Prompts

- What goal deserves my full commitment?
 - Where am I pushing without steering?
 - What distraction needs to leave the road?

VIII Strength

courage · patience · compassion · inner power

Strength is quiet power. It reminds you that gentleness, patience, and self-trust can be more transformative than force.

Upright

Upright, Strength asks you to meet intensity with steadiness. You do not need to overpower what you can understand and guide.

Reversed

Reversed, this card may point to self-doubt, emotional reactivity, or exhaustion from trying to stay strong without support.

In Love

In love, Strength suggests compassion, patience, healing, and the courage to be emotionally honest without becoming harsh.

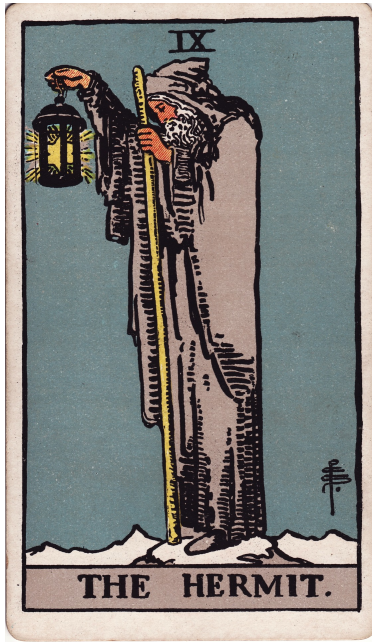

In Career

For career, Strength supports leadership under pressure, difficult conversations, and long-term efforts that require stamina.

"What would strength look like if it were gentle?"

Journal Prompts

- Where am I confusing control with courage?
 - What part of me needs compassion instead of criticism?
 - How can I stay steady today?

IX The Hermit

solitude · wisdom · reflection · inner guidance

The Hermit steps away to see clearly. This card values solitude, study, and the kind of truth that cannot be rushed by noise.

Upright

Upright, The Hermit invites reflection, spiritual study, and a quieter season of finding your own light.

Reversed

Reversed, it may suggest isolation, withdrawal, or staying alone past the point of insight.

In Love

In love, The Hermit can point to a reflective pause, emotional distance, or a need to understand yourself before deciding what comes next.

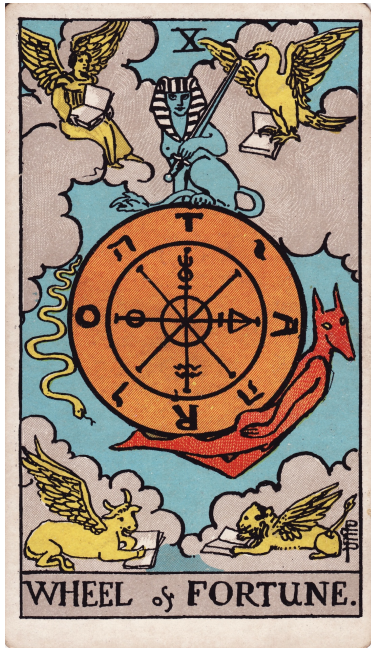

In Career

For career, this card supports deep work, research, independent study, and clarifying your long-term path.

"What can I hear when I stop asking everyone else?"

Journal Prompts

- What truth has become clearer in solitude?
 - Where do I need guidance rather than noise?
 - When does alone time become avoidance?

X Wheel of Fortune

cycles · change · timing · turning point

The Wheel of Fortune marks a turn in the cycle. It reminds you that change is constant, timing matters, and flexibility is a form of wisdom.

Upright

Upright, this card suggests movement, opportunity, and a shift in circumstances. Meet the turn with awareness instead of clinging to the old pattern.

Reversed

Reversed, the Wheel can show resistance to change, repeating cycles, or frustration with timing that cannot be controlled.

In Love

In love, it may indicate a turning point, a changed dynamic, or patterns that need to be recognized before they repeat.

In Career

For career, this card can signal timing, market shifts, unexpected opportunities, or the need to adapt quickly.

"What cycle am I in, and how can I move with it wisely?"

Journal Prompts

- What pattern is repeating in my life?
 - Where is change asking for flexibility?
 - What opportunity could I miss by clinging too tightly?

XI Justice

fairness · truth · accountability · clarity

Justice asks for honesty without shortcuts. It speaks to cause and effect, ethical choices, and the moment when consequences bring clarity.

Upright

Upright, Justice signals a need for objective thinking, legal matters, contracts, or a decision that requires fairness over favoritism.

Reversed

Reversed, it can warn of dishonesty, avoidance of responsibility, imbalance, or outcomes delayed by obscured facts.

In Love

In love, Justice may suggest honest conversations, equal partnership, or evaluating whether needs are balanced on both sides.

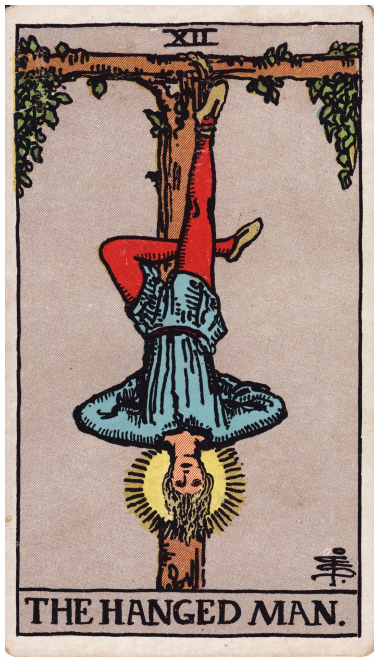

In Career

For career, this card supports contracts, legal review, ethical business practices, and decisions that need to stand up to scrutiny.

"What decision would I make if I valued fairness above comfort?"

Journal Prompts

- Where am I avoiding the full truth?
- What balance needs to be restored?
- What standard am I holding myself to?

XII The Hanged Man

surrender · perspective · pause · release

The Hanged Man does not struggle. It finds wisdom in stillness, choosing to see from a different angle rather than forcing forward motion.

Upright

Upright, this card invites a voluntary pause. Letting go, waiting, or reframing a situation can reveal what effort alone cannot show.

Reversed

Reversed, it may indicate stagnation, pointless sacrifice, or resisting a necessary pause until the pause is forced upon you.

In Love

In love, The Hanged Man can suggest a need to step back, see the relationship differently, or release control over an outcome.

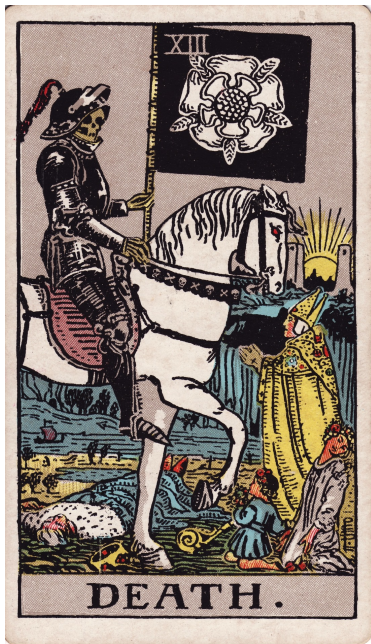

In Career

For career, it may signal a sabbatical, a strategic pause, rethinking direction, or finding value in a delay.

"What might I see if I stop trying so hard to fix this?"

Journal Prompts

- Where is inaction actually the wiser move?
 - What would shift if I viewed this from above?
 - What am I gripping that wants to be released?

XIII Death

ending · transformation · release · rebirth

Death rarely means physical death. It is the card of endings, compost, and the clearing that makes space for something genuinely new.

Upright

Upright, Death signals a necessary ending. A chapter, identity, relationship, or belief is completing. Let it finish cleanly, and the next shape can form.

Reversed

Reversed, it can suggest holding on past the natural end, fear of change, or a transformation that keeps stalling.

In Love

In love, Death may mark the end of a dynamic, a breakup, or a relationship evolving into something fundamentally different.

In Career

For career, this card can indicate leaving a job, closing a project, pivoting paths, or rebuilding after loss.

"What ending am I resisting that has already begun?"

Journal Prompts

- What is ready to be released?
 - What has already ended that I have not acknowledged?
 - What new shape is waiting for cleared space?

XIV Temperance

balance · patience · moderation · integration

Temperance is the art of blending opposites into something stable. It does not rush and does not insist on extremes.

Upright

Upright, this card calls for patience, steady progress, and the willingness to bring opposing forces into harmony. Healing unfolds in its own time.

Reversed

Reversed, it may point to imbalance, excess, impatience, or struggling to find middle ground.

In Love

In love, Temperance suggests a steady, grounded relationship built on mutual adjustment rather than drama or urgency.

In Career

For career, this card supports collaboration, sustainable pacing, iterative improvement, and avoiding burnout.

"Where does this situation need more patience and less force?"

Journal Prompts

- What two forces am I trying to reconcile?
 - Where has impatience cost me balance?
 - What would a sustainable rhythm look like?

XV The Devil

attachment · shadow · temptation · liberation

The Devil shines a light on what holds you. It names the attachment, addiction, fear, or pattern that feels inescapable — and in naming it, loosens the grip.

Upright

Upright, this card asks you to face what has power over you. The chains may look unbreakable, but awareness is the first key. Examine unhealthy attachments, compulsive patterns, or relationships built on control.

Reversed

Reversed, The Devil can signal breaking free, reclaiming agency, or the early discomfort of releasing a long-held pattern.

In Love

In love, it may point to codependency, obsession, power imbalance, or a bond that feels magnetic but costs too much.

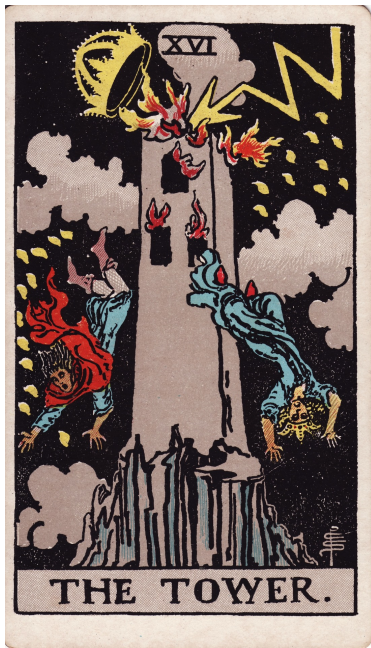

In Career

For career, this card can indicate burnout culture, toxic work environments, over-identification with work, or money patterns that need examining.

"What am I calling necessary that is actually holding me captive?"

Journal Prompts

- What attachment feels most difficult to name?
 - Where have I given away my power?
 - What freedom would be possible if this pattern released?

XVI The Tower

upheaval · revelation · breakdown · awakening

The Tower is the card of sudden truth. Structures built on denial collapse, and what remains is honest ground — painful but real.

Upright

Upright, The Tower signals disruption, shock, or a revelation that changes everything. It hurts, but it clears what was never solid. After the dust settles, rebuild on truth.

Reversed

Reversed, it may suggest averting disaster, prolonging an unstable situation, or internal collapse rather than external events.

In Love

In love, The Tower can mark a sudden breakup, a buried truth surfacing, or the end of a dynamic that was never as stable as it appeared.

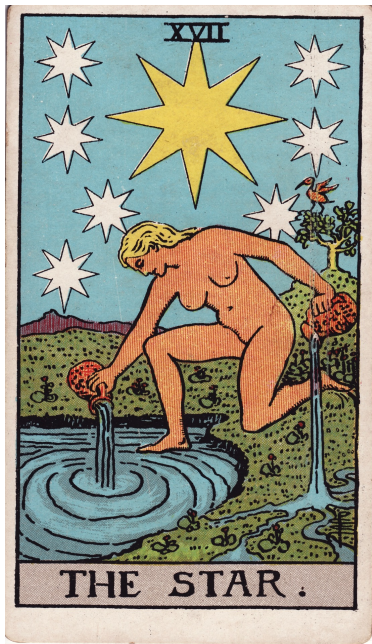

In Career

For career, this card can indicate sudden job loss, organizational shakeup, or a project that collapses and forces a better direction.

"What truth have I been building on top of instead of facing?"

Journal Prompts

- What structure in my life feels fragile?
 - What revelation have I been avoiding?
 - What could be rebuilt better after this clears?

XVII The Star

hope · healing · faith · renewal

After The Tower comes The Star. This is the card of quiet hope — not wishful thinking, but the calm certainty that healing is possible and renewal is real.

Upright

Upright, The Star brings peace, inspiration, and a sense of purpose rekindled. Trust the process of recovery. Your well is being refilled.

Reversed

Reversed, it may indicate lost faith, creative drought, disconnection from purpose, or difficulty believing that things can improve.

In Love

In love, The Star signals healing after heartbreak, renewed openness, or a gentle and authentic connection growing slowly.

In Career

For career, this card supports creative renewal, meaningful work, purpose-driven projects, and recovery from burnout.

"What is quietly healing, even if I cannot see the progress yet?"

Journal Prompts

- Where is hope trying to reach me?
 - What practice refills my spirit?
 - What dream deserves a second chance?

XVIII The Moon

illusion · intuition · fear · the subconscious

The Moon walks you through uncertain terrain. Not everything is as it appears, and the path forward requires trusting your deeper senses over surface logic.

Upright

Upright, this card speaks to confusion, hidden information, dreams, and fears that distort perception. Move slowly, observe carefully, and trust intuition over appearances.

Reversed

Reversed, it can indicate lifting fog, fears resolving, repressed material surfacing, or clarity returning after a disorienting period.

In Love

In love, The Moon may point to unspoken anxieties, unclear intentions, emotional projection, or dynamics that feel different in daylight than at night.

In Career

For career, this card can signal office politics, incomplete information, creative blocks, or the need to read between the lines.

"What am I afraid to see clearly?"

Journal Prompts

- What fear is distorting my view?
 - What does my body know that my mind keeps questioning?
 - Where would more information bring relief?

XIX The Sun

joy · vitality · success · clarity

The Sun is the card of radiant clarity. After the long night of The Moon, daylight returns with warmth, confidence, and uncomplicated joy.

Upright

Upright, The Sun signals success, vitality, celebration, and a period of genuine happiness. Let yourself receive it without guarding against it.

Reversed

Reversed, it may suggest dimmed joy, struggling to feel optimism, success delayed, or difficulty letting yourself fully shine.

In Love

In love, The Sun suggests warmth, playfulness, mutual joy, and a relationship that feels life-giving rather than draining.

In Career

For career, this card supports recognition, creative breakthroughs, confident presentations, and work that aligns with your authentic self.

"What would I do if I let myself fully enjoy this moment?"

Journal Prompts

- What success am I downplaying?
 - Where does joy feel most natural?
 - What would I create if I trusted my light?

XX Judgement

awakening · reckoning · purpose · calling

Judgement is the card of inner calling. A deeper awareness rises, asking you to assess your life honestly and answer what genuinely matters.

Upright

Upright, Judgement signals a personal awakening, a significant decision, or a moment of honest self-evaluation. The past is reviewed so the future can be chosen with clarity.

Reversed

Reversed, it may suggest avoiding self-reflection, fear of judgment, ignoring a calling, or being overly critical of yourself or others.

In Love

In love, Judgement can mark a relationship reckoning, a second chance, or the need to honestly assess whether a connection aligns with your values.

In Career

For career, this card supports answering a vocation, making a bold career move, or evaluating whether your work reflects your deeper purpose.

"What is asking to be heard, finally, without distraction?"

Journal Prompts

- What truth have I been postponing?
 - What would I change if I honestly reviewed the last year?
 - What calling feels louder each time I ignore it?

XXI The World

completion · wholeness · fulfillment · integration

The World marks the end of a major cycle. It signals completion, integration, and the quiet satisfaction of arriving somewhere you worked hard to reach.

Upright

Upright, this card celebrates achievement, wholeness, and a chapter closing with grace. Acknowledge how far you have come before beginning again.

Reversed

Reversed, it may indicate unfinished business, a completion that feels hollow, or struggling to close a chapter and move on.

In Love

In love, The World can signify a fulfilling relationship, a healthy ending, or the sense of coming home to yourself before seeking partnership.

In Career

For career, this card supports graduation, project completion, global opportunities, and celebrating major milestones.

"What cycle is closing, and how can I honor its completion?"

Journal Prompts

- What have I completed that deserves recognition?
 - What wisdom from this cycle do I carry forward?
 - What new cycle is waiting at the threshold?
